The conclusion reached here, based on payment made or arranged for before the stories of the captain and other March I last, when Great Britain essurvivors, is that the shell fire attack its blockade, are facing a on the Ancona was made without warning, that it brought the liner to a dead stop, and that time was given by the submarine commander to allow the passervatively estimated that is conservatively estimated that sengers and crew to get into the life worth of goods belonging boats.

> Loss of Life Due to Shell Fire. It was the shell fire, reports agree as it caused a panic among the passen-gers, mostly women and children, who, terror stricken, made a mad scramble for representations made by the boats, the consequence being that many of the boats capsized before they could be rowed to safety. Only eight boats are said to have got away.
